LIEUT. COL. LOGAN FELAND.

Honored by being the second in command of the first regiment of U. S. Marines to carry the Stars and Stripes into battle in France, Lieut. Col. Logan Feland, Marine Corps, formerly of Hopkinsville, has gone overseas with his regiment of sea-soldiers.

Lieutenant Colonel Feland was born in Hopkinsville August 18, 1869. He was mustered into service May 21, 1898, as Captain, Company F, Third Kentucky Infantry, and was mustered out and honorably discharged May 16, 1899. He was appointed a first lieutenant in the marine corps July 1, 1899, and has since served at the various posts of the corps and on board ships of the navy, in Cuba, Panama, the Philippine Islands, and in Santo Domingian waters; on special duty at headquarters of the marine corps from July, 1901, to March, 1902, in connection with the quarter-master's department; thence to Annapolis, Md., to superintend the construction of the marine barracks at that place, and at various times has served as instructor at the marine corps School of Application, and the Advance Base School. He was promoted Captain March 3, 1903, and Major August 29, 1916, and recently qualified for promotion to Lieutenant Colonel; was at Vera Cruz, Mexico, and on April 22, 1914, participated in the occupation of that city in the engagement incident thereto. For a considerable time he was in command of the Mining Company, Advance Base Regiment, and through his efforts that company has been brought to a high state of efficiency. Lieut. Col. Feland is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The force of "do-all-dare-all" Marines which he leads are prepared for any emergency—eager to fight, fully competent to represent our democracy wherever they may be needed, and it should be a source of pride to Hopkinsville people to know that a former resident will be second in command of the first contingent of U. S. Marines overseas. The record of the "Soldiers of the Sea" has always been admirable, they sustain heroically today the finest traditions of the past, deserve the unquestioning confidence the nation reposes in them, and when Lieutenant Colonel Feland leads his regiment on the firing line he will be a credit to his country, his corps, his home and himself.

More red-blooded young men are needed to join him in France. Are you one of them?

During Sunday and Monday, the first two days of the new drive, the Russians captured 300 officers and 18,000 men and on Tuesday and Wednesday probably added thousands more to the total. Twenty-nine guns and thirty three machine guns were taken from the Austro-Germans.

American Independence day was celebrated enthusiastically in England and France as well as on the battle fronts. In Paris a battalion of the first American expeditionary force on its way to the front, was the center of the celebration. Paris turned out a crowd that no American ever surpassed for size, enthusiasm and profusion of Stars and Stripes.

The weekly summary issued Monday shows that 15 British merchant ships of more than 1,000 tons were sunk and five vessels of less than that tonnage. Fifteen fishing vessels also were lost. With the exception of the week ending June 3 the sinkings were the lowest of any period since early in April.

ONE WAY OF SAYING IT

By EBYTHE TERRILL

The rolling links of the Glenwood Golf club stretched off to the west and lost themselves in a series of undulating hills. From where he was sitting on the porch of the rambling clubhouse building, Dick Arnold could see the orange sweater of Doris Ackley flashing in the early afternoon sun. He watched idly as the girl completed her final putt on the home green and then strolled easily toward the veranda, unconscious of his presence. When at last she discovered him, the faintest tinge of red crept into her sun-browned cheeks, but she smiled pleasantly and seated herself on the railing before him.

For a long two minutes neither spoke. The girl, her face half turned from him, gazed wistfully across the rolling greens. The man studied her silently. A slight breeze ruffled the brown curls of her hair, releasing them from the bondage of a small straw hat.

"Doris," he said suddenly, "you promised to answer me today."

"Why do you want to know so soon?" she asked.

"Because I can't wait any longer. It means everything in the world to me, and if you're going to say 'No' I'd rather have it over with."

"To tell the truth, Dick," she said, "I don't know exactly what I'm going to say. We've known each other all our lives, and I always thought that some day we would be married. But lately, Dick, especially for the last year or so, I've begun to doubt you just a little. It isn't that I've doubted your love," she hastened to explain, "but I've doubted your ability to arouse my love."

"In what way?"

"For the past two years you've been drifting along. You have all the money you need and you've grown careless; you spend the afternoons playing golf and the evenings playing bridge. And in the mornings you sleep. Is that your idea of a man's work, Dick?"

"No," he answered, "it isn't." He gazed frankly into the girl's accusing eyes. "I've been drifting along as you have said, but—does that make you love me less?"

"I think that perhaps it does," she answered honestly. "I have always thought of you as a man's man, Dick, but instead of that you are growing into a fop."

He winced slightly at her words, but his eyes met hers bravely.

"What can I do to make you care as I want you to?" he asked.

"I want you to turn about and do things worth while," she answered. "This afternoon, for instance, you meet Ned Farley in the final round for the club championship. Ned is a better player than you, but if you resolve to win and show me that you can stand by your resolution, perhaps I'll give you the answer you need."

"And you would stake all your future on a golf match?" he asked incredulously.

"It isn't the match that counts," she explained, "it's what the match stands for."

He rose and squared his shoulders, the heavy muscles standing out strangely beneath the light fabric of his golf coat.

"If I win, will you promise to marry me?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered.

It was almost six o'clock, and the sun was beginning to disappear around a neighboring ridge when Doris Ackley discovered the two finalists. The match had narrowed down to a question of putts. Dick tapped the ball gently. Straight toward the hole it rolled. But suddenly it struck a large stick, swerved for a fraction of a second and then came to a halt.

And then, to make matters worse, Ned Farley holed a 20-foot putt and won the match. When Dick congratulated his opponent Doris noticed that his face was pale. She went back to the railing on the porch and waited. The sun sank beneath the neighboring ridge and streamed the west with crimson. Twilight fell rapidly, but the girl still remained in her place. Finally steps sounded on the porch and Dick Arnold stood before her.

"I didn't win," he said simply, "but I tried my level best."

"I know," she answered. "I was watching you."

"That was the hardest of all—to lose on the eighteenth hole when I knew you were watching."

Something in his voice caused the girl's eyes to soften.

"Does a mere golf match count so much, Dick?" she asked.

"Didn't you tell me if I won today you would promise to marry me?"

"Yes, but what does that matter?"

"I didn't win, and I suppose the promise is off."

"Why, Dick?" The girl's eyes shone like twin stars in the gathering twilight. "Did I say that if you didn't win I would refuse to marry you?"

"No, you didn't say that." Something in her face caused his own face to light up with sudden happiness. "Do you mean to say you will marry me, anyhow?"

The girl nodded.

"You've shown me today if you try hard you can do things," she answered. "It was only bad luck which defeated you."

TERRIBLY SWOLLEN

Suffering Described As Torture
Relieved by Black-Draught.

Rossville, Ga.—Mrs. Kate Lee Able, of this place, writes: "My husband is an engineer, and once while illing, he injured himself with a piece of heavy machinery, across the abdomen. He was so sore he could not bear to press on himself at all, on chest or abdomen. He weighed 165 lbs., and fell off until he weighed 110 lbs., in two weeks."

He became constipated and it looked like he would die. We had three different doctors, yet with all their medicine, his bowels failed to act. He would turn up a ten-cent bottle of castor oil, and drink it two or three days in succession. He did this yet without result. We became desperate, he suffered so. He was swollen terribly. He told me his suffering could only be described as torture.

I sent and bought Theodor's Black-Draught. I made him take a big dose, and when it began to act he fainted, he was in such misery, but he got relief and began to mend at once. He got well, and we both feel he owes his life to Theodor's Black-Draught."

Theodor's Black-Draught will help you to keep fit, ready for the day's work. Try it! NC-131

Mushrooms Go to Waste.
Mushrooms are allowed to go to waste in enormous quantities every year, but in part this is on account of the grave risks involved in the selection of edible varieties from among the poisonous kinds that grow in woods and fields. If everyone were able to discriminate with certainty and precision between the safe and unsafe mushrooms that nature sows profusely about the country uncounted thousands of tons of good food might be added to the supplies already possessed.

Robins Are Gluttons.

On an average day food is brought to the robin's nest every 15 minutes. Each young robin requires daily two or three times its weight in bugs and worms. When food is offered these ever-hungry little creatures open their large yellow mouths wide and jostle each other.

Pass the Cake, Please.

One would hardly look for much excitement in a well-regulated kitchen, but we've witnessed some stirring scenes in one.—Exchange.

Oil of Soy Bean.

Oil of the soy bean is a palatable food widely eaten by the Chinese. This vegetable oil also is used in making paints, varnishes, soaps, rubber substitutes, linoleum, waterproof goods, lubricants and printing ink.

Tact in Conversation.
Tact is an important quality in conversation. This subtle instinct is not possessed by everyone. It may be attained by quick judgment and intelligence, by observing the mistakes of others and profiting by them, by seeing small changes of manner, or the passing expression of face. It tells one what subjects will be agreeable and what must be avoided.—Exchange.

Inconsistency.

Do we realize the tremendous amount of power of even our habits is inconsistency? An inconsistency is like the sleeve of a careless school boy at his copybook; he smears and blots with his arm what he writes fair with his hand. It is the smeared page of the world looks at and judges us each and not the care and pains with which we may originally have tried to reduce in our lives the precepts of Gospel.—Donald Sage Mackay.

First Savings Bank.

The first bank organized for the purpose of serving as a safe place for the savings of small depositors was founded in May, 1816, in the little village of Rothwell, Scotland. The earlier institutions with a similar purpose almost invariably confined their deposits to the savings of domestic servants and other wage-earners, but paying no interest and returning the money to the members of the association in the form of annuities after they had reached a certain age.

Pussy Cat Indicted.

American foresters present a very strong argument against our friend, the pussy cat, as being by far the most destructive of animals, wild or tame, of the birds, and every forester considers the birds as the greatest friends of the trees. Without the destruction wrought by the birds on the insect enemies of the trees there would be after a generation no tree left for the insects would multiply fearfully and demolish every growing tree and plant.—Grit.

Better Banking Service for Farmers

A vast fund, now aggregating a thousand million dollars has been assembled by Act of Congress to stand back of the farming and business interests of the country.

This fund is the Federal Reserve Banking System, of which we are a member, and it enables us better than ever before to supply our farmers with the credit and currency they need for producing crops and to protect them against disorganized markets.

If you are not linked up with this system as one of our depositors come in and let us tell you how it helps you.
